The holistic osmosis of Dhana

The word osmosis comes from the Greek word osmòs and it means push. The osmosis is a phenomenon in which an element spreads to another. In physics and in biology osmosis is when a solvent combines with a solute by going through a partially permeable membrane that is permeable to the solvent but not to the solute. An example of partially permeable membrane is the plasmatic one, which covers human body cells.

Also the adjective holistic comes from the Greek word holòs, which means the entirety, the whole made up of many parts whose behaviors are influenced by the whole, but at the same time they affect the whole.

Holistic osmosis means push of the whole.

Dhana (www.dhana.org) means money in Sanskrit and thought in Swahili. Dhana is the currency of the Republic of the Earth. It's the only real value currency, because it's issued with intrinsic value or guaranteed by enterprises' capitals for a nominal value equal to the one of platinum: one Dhana per one gram of platinum 999/1000.

The main aim of Dhana is the equal redistribution of wealth. For this reason each inhabitant of the planet that is at least sixteen years old is assigned Dhana in equal parts: a hundred Dhana for each one.

The holistic osmosis of Dhana is the process by which we equally redistribute monetary wealth among all the inhabitants of the planet by distributing Dhana in equal parts.

Through this process Dhana enters circulation and it takes the place of legal tender currencies lacking in value (if legal tender currencies had real value, legal tender wouldn't be necessary).

Who takes part in the monetary system becomes means of diffusion. The whole of all participants carries out the function of partially-permeable membrane in osmosis process: it causes the injection of Dhana in the monetary system of legal tender currencies and it prevents the injection of legal tender currencies in the system of Dhana.

As money has become the fundamental means on which economic relationship are based, by watering down money concentration, we water down wealth concentration too. So, the fundamental factor of economic system becomes work again, as it must be.
